People Have Asked Me...

People have asked me why I became a photographer, and, quite simply, I am just doing what I love. It's my passion for photography that has led me to weddings and events, to create memorable images that will live and endure for generations. My style of wedding photography is based in photojournalism, with a mix of color and black and white. My experience is earned from over ten years as wedding, portrait, and event photographer. For more information, please feel free to call.

Creating History - Yours

I remember looking back through my parent's photo albums. Each photo was a glimpse of family history. Aunts, uncles, great-grand parents, friends, people whose stories I heard of many times and met only through their image in a photograph. Photos that were old, black & white, sometimes yellow, sometimes gray, held in the album by yellowed scotch tape or black photo corners. Albums made of black paper pages, pages so stiff from years of sitting on the shelf that they creaked when turned.

And yet each page was like magic, a mystery, and each photo had a story. Looking at the photos only made me wonder, who, what, when, where, so many questions left to answer. If a photo is worth one-thousand words then these albums were novels. Novels of family vacations, dinners, friends, anniversaries, and weddings. It was as if time stood still, if only for a moment. And caught in the stillness of time was the memory of a lifetime.

My dream, my desire, my passion is to create those photos that capture the memory of a lifetime. Photos that will live for generations, that tell your story to your children, to you children's children. To whoever opens your family album. I believe that the moments that make up life are the quiet, special and magical moments. And these are the moments that live forever.

Quite simply, I am creating history. Yours.
